

Cristin C. Slater, MD

Cristin C. Slater, MD, is a board certified reproductive endocrinologist and infertility specialist. She matriculated a Bachelor's degree from the University of Utah, majoring in Health Sciences. She received her medical degree from the University of Utah, followed by specialty training in Obstetrics and Gynecology at Harbor-UCLA Medical Center. Subsequently, she completed her sub-specialty fellowship training in Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility at the University of Southern California. Dr. Slater practiced as an assistant professor in the division of Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility for three years at the University of Southern California, where she taught medical students and reproductive endocrinology fellows. She has been the medical director and worked at the Idaho Center for Reproductive Medicine since 2002.

Dr. Slater is highly trained in laparoscopic, hysteroscopic, and microscopic surgery, as well as with advanced reproductive technologies and hormone management. She has written three chapters in medical textbooks and published many articles in peer-reviewed medical journals. She is active in regional and national medical societies where she has presented her research. She is a past president and prior board member of the Pacific Coast Reproductive Society. She is an advocate for access to reproductive care and has spoken to legislatures on behalf of fertility patients and fertility providers.